How to use the App to do questions written specifically for our residency!

When To Call An Attending
The following are absolute indications to call your attending (or the primary attending for the patient). These calls should occur immediately and not be delayed for anything other than patient care.

- At the end of EVERY SINGLE DAY—if the senior is off, the intern will be in contact with the attending
- If you are the cross-covering senior and you admit a patient to another subspecialty without an intern
- Change in status (i.e. floor -> MSD -> ICU)
- Code status change if not previously discussed
- Patient leaving AMA
- Death of a patient
- Anytime you have questions or concerns

Reminder: Overnight admissions are assigned to a specific attending who is ALWAYS available for questions!

Diabetes NOW
Admitting a patient with an insulin pump? Not sure of a discharge dose of Lantus when sending out a patient on high dose steroids? Ask Diabetes Now!

Who: An interdisciplinary team which includes an endocrinologist, pharmacist, diabetes educator, NP, and more!

What: Not a consult service as they may not physically see the patient; however, they are available for specific questions! They are also responsible for the DKA and BBC OrderSets!

How: Ask the Page operator for Diabetes Now, or use pager ID 14365.
Prep. On Osmosis you can find 17 questions written by our residents.

Congrats to Heepke Wendroth for recognizing the emojis below as the JONES CRITERIA used for acute rheumatic fever! The characters below represent arthritis, carditis, subcutaneous nodules, erythema marginatum, and Sydenham chorea. Therese Caya also answered correctly but was a few minutes behind!
