University of Cincinnati College of Medicine Office of Research

News for the week of November 18, 2019

College of Medicine Team Science Award.
The Team Science Award recognizes a team of College of Medicine faculty members who have successfully created and sustained a multidisciplinary research team that significantly contributes to the mission of the College. We would like to congratulate The Zinc Group, our FY 20 recipient of the Team Science Award. The Zinc Group is comprised of team members: Kavitha Subramanian Vignesh, Ph.D., Julio A. Landero, Ph.D., Alexey Porollo, Ph.D., and George S. Deepe, M.D. They are currently dissecting the significance of zinc pathways in inflammasomes, energy preferences of immune cells and training the innate arm of immunity to tackle infections.

Research Recognition Awards Program.
College of Medicine researchers who received funding in FY 2019 will be recognized in addition to College of Medicine Office of Research award recipients and Women in Medicine and Science champion awardees at the Research Recognition Awards Program. Join us for refreshments and appetizers and help us celebrate our awardees this Thursday, November 21st from 4:30-7pm.

UC Health Office of Clinical Research.
The UC Health Office of Clinical Research is constantly thinking of ways to improve study start up. They would like continue to develop efficient processes. In order to achieve this, they will be moving the Research Approval process to REDCap. Study teams will soon be able to submit their studies for OCR review and approval from a web based form. This update will improve communication and data capture. Look for the official announcement coming soon. For more information, please contact Zak Johnson at Zachary.Johnson@UCHealth.com.

Writing the One Pager: The Shortest Path to Success
Do you know what grantmakers look for when deciding what research to fund? The answers might not be what you think. Showing grantmakers that you know what they want is as important as showing them what you can do with their money. Attend a UC Office of Research workshop on Friday, November 22nd from 11-12:30pm in University Hall, Room 450 to learn how to effectively communicate the impact and significance of your research through the written word and visuals. Attendees will workshop two white papers, one for a technical audience and one for a non-specialized audience. You will leave with tools you can use to effectively draft white papers and proposal summaries for your own research.
